DEP to take James River to task for its dirty discharges

With the state Legislature defying the governor on the question of what to do about the discoloration of the Androscoggin River (and other major rivers in the state), the Department of Environmental Protection is quietly preparing to put pressure on the James River mill, in Berlin, N.H., to clean up its act. The Berlin mill is the biggest source of discoloration of the Androscoggin River in the Bethel area, according to a DEP study released last fall. It also pollutes the river with higher concentrations of cancer-causing dioxin than any other mill. (See article in last week's Citizen.)

Asked to comment on how the Legislature's move to pass legislation controlling color, odor and foam in papermill discharges into the river would affect the James River mill, mill spokesman Dan Girvan said Maine standards would have no effect on the mill's discharges. "The Berlin plant operates under permits and standards established by the State of New Hampshire and the Federal Environmental Protection Agency. Accordingly, the company will operate the plant within the limits allowed in those permits," Mr. Girvan said.

He added, "To date we have been presented no evidence from the State of Maine that any color discharge that might be coming from our Berlin plant has any deleterious effect on the waters of the State of Maine."

The DEP study mentioned above, entitled "Regaining full use of Maine's rivers," points out that the Androscoggin River above the James River mill has a

Greenstock stuck for space to spread septage

As if dealing with stump dump problems and solid waste uncertainties weren't enough, Greenwood and Woodstock officials now must also find a new place to dispose of sewage pumped from septic and holding tanks in the two towns.

State law requires that all towns provide a means for disposing of the residue from sewer systems. In smaller towns without sewage treatment plants this has generally meant maintaining a piece of land where it can be spread. For many years the Paris Utility District has taken such waste from Greenwood, Woodstock and other towns—with the hauler paying the fee.

But finding its facilities now straining to accommodate waste from its own towns, the PUD recently stopped accepting that coming in from Greenwood, Woodstock and a number of other towns, according to Greenwood Selectwoman Marie Bartlett.

Summer residents are due to start arriving soon, so the timing couldn't be worse, Mrs. Bartlett said. "The first thing they want to do is have their tanks pumped out."

According to Ralph Merrill, of Bethel, who pumps and hauls away such waste, the sewage squeeze is on throughout the area. Greenwood and Woodstock are not alone, he said; Andover, Gilead and Albany Township, as well as other area towns are confronting the same problem.

The town of Rumford has provided a quick fix for the Greenstock dilemma by agreeing to take the sewage on an

School district budget passes without opposition

Only 75 voters turned out for the SAD #41 annual budget meeting last Thursday evening.

The voters—largely employees of the school district and their families—approved all eight budget items unanimously and, but for one request for clarification, without discussion.

The budget approved at the meeting totals $5,510,440, up 10 percent from the current year's budget. Each of the 75 votes cast on the total budget represented nearly $74,000 to the district. The meeting was concluded in less than 30 minutes.

Woodstock starts one-stop automobile registration

Beginning this week, Woodstock car owners will no longer have to drive to the Greenwood town office to register their vehicles.

Town Manager Vern Maxfield said that by the end of the week the town office will be set up to collect registration fees, issue license plates and transfer registrations.

In the past, Woodstock motorists paid their excise tax at the town office, then moved on to Greenwood to deal with registration matters.

Mr. Maxfield said the new, one-stop service will cover all motor vehicles under 6,000 pounds.

State to fine Bethel $35,000 for sewer plant violations; DEP to limit sewer hook-ups

Charging that the Town of Bethel sent millions of gallons of untreated sewage into the Androscoggin River between 1982 and 1986, the state Department of Environmental Protection, with the concurrence of the Attorney General's office, has decided to fine the Town $35,000.

According to the consent decree—received by the Bethel town office last Thursday—during the period in question, any inflow to the sewage treatment plant, in excess of 190,000 gallons a day "was routinely discharged without any treatment into the Androscoggin River."

The consent decree points out the problem was caused by "the inability of the two rectangular clarifiers to treat the volume of wastewater for which the facility is designed and licensed." The system is designed and licensed to handle 200,000 gallons of wastewater per day. It currently is able to handle about 120,000 gallons per day.

Bethel officials reacted with anger and shock at the consent decree. "Certain parts are unacceptable," said Town Manager Rodney Lynch.

"My recommendation is that the selectmen not sign it," he told the Board of Selectmen Monday night.

The selectmen were in no mood to sign a document that would commit them to paying the State $35,000, in addition to the $480,000 they (and Town Meeting) have already committed to begin rectifying the problems at the sewer plant.

Board Chairman Arlan Jodrey was particularly upset that the 400 users of the municipal sewer were going to be hit with more costs—costs that he said properly should be paid by all the taxpayers of the town. (The $480,000 loan to repair the sewer plant will be repaid by the sewer users alone.)

The consent decree, in fact, notes that the problems at the sewer plant are compounded by the fact that the system is being asked to handle inputs other than sewage. As the consent decree states, the Bethel sewer system "is a combined sewer system which receives significant volumes of stormwater and groundwater in addition to sanitary wastewater."

One of the items the decree orders town officials to check on is how many homes are pumping stormwater and groundwater into the sewer system.

The decree also orders town officials to replace large amounts of sewer pipe in order to keep out infiltrating groundwater. The decree orders that the town find and eliminate five gallons of infiltrated water for each additional gallon of effluent allowed into the sewer system

Trash recycling facility to set up shop in former feldspar mill in W. Paris

The former feldspar mill at the end of Maple Street in West Paris may soon get another lease on life. Guy Hart, owner of Tri-State Rubbish, in Mechanic Falls, is negotiating to purchase the mill and plans to reopen it as a recycling center.

Mr. Hart said he expects to have the recycling facility in operation by the end of this month.

Recyclables will be separated elsewhere from the rubbish collected by his company, Mr. Hart said; then shipped to West Paris to be processed and packaged for shipment out.

"We'll be recycling metals, cardboard, paper, glass—anything that can be separated out of the trash flow to keep the final volume down," he said.

The operation is not expected to be a profit-maker, at least not at first, he said. But with tipping fees at landfills and incinerators soaring, and with mandatory recycling on the horizon, having such a facility is quickly becoming a necessity in the rubbish business.

"You have to recycle or you lose customers," he said. "You can either get into recycling or get out of the trash business."

Three-quarters of the rubbish collected by Tri-State comes from the Mid-Maine Waste Action Corporation, which serves Auburn and a number of surrounding communities.

Mr. Hart declined to speculate on the 'Kids for Trees' assures students many years of growth, learning

Eighty-one SAD #44 3rd-graders planted 100 balsam fir trees last week in what promises to be a multi-year and multi-discipline learning experience.

In coming years, the students will study and nurture the trees, until near the turn of the century. In 1998, when the students are seniors at Telstar, the trees will be sold as Christmas trees and the proceeds of the sale will help finance Project Graduation.

In the years between, the trees will provide a real-life focus for many of the students' learning activities. Not only will forestry skills and knowledge be explored in each year's science curriculum, but biological, environmental, even economic implications of the project will be studied by the students throughout their school careers.

A number of district personnel have worked hard to make the project happen, and they have been helped by representatives of the Oxford County Soil and Water Conservation District, the Maine and United States forest services, and the Boise-Cascade Paper Group. Bob Chadbourne, of P.H. Chadbourne & Company, donated the use of the land—between the mill and Route 26—where the trees will grow.

The idea for the "Kids for Trees" project originated with Donna Pearce, a forester with Boise-Cascade, who proposed it first to Jim Chandler, educational consultant for the soil and water conservation district. He, in turn, approached Superintendent Dewaine Craig with the idea. Walter Cooley, of the Maine Forest Service was soon contributing time and expertise to the project.

Since October, 3rd Grade teachers have been fundraising for the project, with their pupils writing letters, making posters and selling special "Kids for Trees" pencils.

A number of community members and organizations have pitched in as well. Bethel's Mundt-Allen Post #60 donated the money to purchase the first batch of trees, and Bethel Rotary covered half the cost of the pencils.

Organizers hope their efforts will result in enough profit to pay for fertilizers and insecticides, and to start a "Kids for Trees" scrapbook.

Shirley Merrill, a 3rd Grade teacher at Crescent Park School, is contact person for the project. She said she is delighted with the support the project has received so far. "Our students are very motivated in the forest and fundraising activities, and they are getting wonderful help from the forestry people—like

Two Gould artists win monetary awards in national art contest

Junior Alesia Norling, of Skowhegan, and senior Mandy Little, of Portland, were recently chosen as recipients of awards in the 1989 Frances Hook Scholarship Fund's National Art Contest. Their works were chosen from submissions from over 1,100 schools from throughout the United States.

The Hook Art Contest is the largest in the country for high school students, and this year granted $88,000 in scholarship awards to young artists to fund their studies.

Alesia Norling's "Pears," an ink on paper still life, took 1st-place in the 10th-12th Grade age group. Besides earning this distinction, she will be awarded a $2,500 art scholarship, which may be used towards tuition, specialized art training, or art supplies.

Mandy Little used newspaper with pen and craypas to produce "Amaryllis," which earned her honorable mention and a $500 art scholarship, placing her work among the top-28 works submitted in the 10th-12th Grade age category.

Last year, Becky Margonelli, of North Edgcomb, was awarded an honorable mention in the Frances Hook Art Contest.

Legislature should not be a career

Despite a Democrat-sponsored move to study whether the Legislature should be a full-time operation, the majority of Mainers seem to like things the way they are, with legislators getting together in Augusta for just a few months a year.

Along with this notion that the Legislature should be a part-time job, is the notion that the Legislature should be a place where leaders of local communities can go and serve for awhile and then return back to their local haunts and local habits.

Increasingly, however, this is not the way things work. For a person who wants to remain near the levers of power, each return trip to Augusta increases his or her ability to get a firmer grip on those levers. For some—such as House Speaker John Martin (D-Eagle Lake)—the seduction of power leads them to act like administrators rather than legislators.

Now comes Rep. Dana Hanley (R-Paris), with a better idea. The young legislator has introduced a bill to limit the terms of senators and representatives to five terms—that's 10 years. Reaction to the idea has generally split along party lines, with Democrats damning it and Republicans praising it.

If one does not look at the idea through partisan glasses, it is clear that there is much to recommend it. For starters, it would decrease the opportunity for a super-ambitious politician to make a career of being elected to the Legislature and aggrandizing too much power. Secondly, it would broaden the competition for seats in the Legislature and induce a larger number of qualified citizens to run for the senate or the house.

It is clear that otherwise-qualified candidates are being scared off from challenging well-entrenched incumbents because those incumbents have had too many years to bring too much pork barrel to the home folks. To challenge one of them is to invest a lot of time and money in vain.

What is needed in the Legislature is a continuous infusion of new blood and new ideas. Rep. Hanley's proposal would guarantee this. Just as the tendency to dictatorship is stifled by permitting the governor to serve only two terms, there should be similar restrictions on legislators.

And if Maine sets a good example on how to keep the Legislature an open institution instead of a closed club, who knows... the idea might even spread to Washington, where it's easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for an incumbent to be unseated. bfw

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

My recent travels to Bend, Ore., have added new fervor to my campaign to see the Bethel area recognized as a year-round outdoor recreation mecca. Bend, situated on the eastern edge of the Cascade Mountain Range, has a heritage of logging and is still a center of wood products industry activity today. However, in recent years it has also developed a companion outdoor recreation industry that encourages tourists to visit its wonderful High Desert Museum, its myriad of ski and bicycle shops, its riverside park, its bike paths that wind throughout the town, its nearby state park that boasts a highly acclaimed rock climbing wall, and its resorts that offer such activities as downhill and cross-country skiing, snowmobile tours, horseback riding, rollerblading, mountain biking, swimming, hiking, etc.

I was struck by the similarities between Bend and Bethel and began wondering what can be done to create in Bethel the feelings of joy and celebration of outdoor activity that one notices immediately upon entering Bend. When I arrived home and read in your April 26 editorial entitled "It's time to save our river" that "a Bethel effort" felt that the town government had better things to do than worry about cleaning up the Androscoggin, the answer was clear: elect new leadership.

Times are changing. Opportunities for establishing this area as the Bend, Ore., of the East are all around us. However, if the present leaders of the town claim not to be interested in the opportunity for clean rivers, bike paths, hiking trails, riverside parks, and increased tourism benefits for residents and non-residents alike, I say find leaders who are. I am certain that the majority of Bethel voters would approve of the lifestyle that improved recreational offerings would bring. Let's find some candidates who can help provide such offerings and put them in office.

To the Editor:

When a cow drinks water, it turns it into milk. When a snake drinks water, it turns it into venom. Stereotypical thinking poisons the mind, and when espoused publicly, as in the "Thoughts from the Pastor's Study" column in your issue of April 19, it poisons the minds of your readers.

All sergeants, regular army or otherwise, are not "typical" heavy drinkers, "constantly" swearing, nor "hard and gruff."

Neither are all members of the clergy cast in the mold of Elmer Gantry, Father Devine, Jimmy Swaggart, et al.

If prayer can cause a superior enemy force to vanish, it should be able to do the same to toxic stereotypes.

I recommend prayer to all who need it.

To the Editor:

I would like to say a big, heartfelt thank-you to the Shriners for sponsoring the trip to the Shriners Circus for the 4th graders of SAD #44 on Saturday, April 15. Dwight Merrill and Burnie Rice did a marvelous job of safely transporting approximately 100 children and chaperones for a fun-filled day which was topped off by a stop at McDonald's for lunch, where every child had plenty of food.

Thanks again, Shriners, for your generosity and thoughtfulness—this year and all the years in the past.

To the Editor:

The passing of King Cummings (developer and owner of Sugarloaf USA) comes at a time of great celebration for Western Maine. The region's citizens are faced with numerous decisions regarding economic growth and environmental protection; we face concerns over education, tax rates and the aspirations of our young. While we have the potential for a broader economic base and greater security than ever before, many residents do not know how to take advantage of the changes in progress.

King showed a wire-walker's skill in balancing these concerns in his work in industry and recreation. He showed that the resources of this stunning region can be used wisely and in harmony with the environment; he brought options and security to an area that had limited choices in the recent past.

His death leaves a tremendous void. It was his knowledge and vision that led to the creation of the Western Mountains Alliance, and his leadership which allowed the Alliance to achieve so much in so short a time.

King's ideas and concepts still resonate and his vision carries on. The loss of his strength and leadership will be felt more than ever throughout the region. We must continue in our efforts to promote careful growth in the region, provide jobs for our residents and protect our beauty. There can be no more fitting memorial to King than the continued success of the Alliance.

With respect for the past and with energy for the future,

Leslie B. Otter, Chairman
Western Mountains Alliance

To the Editor:

First of all, I would like to say I do not support drinking of under age, whether in school or out. I do not support drug abuse or any kind of abuse. I have always thought if someone had been drinking or disruptive in a classroom or in school he or she is sent to the principal. From there their parents are notified during school hours or called in the evening.

I'm under the understanding there are five detention rooms at the high school. If you kick someone out for 10 school days (two weeks), whether guilty or not guilty, it would be hard for some to ever catch up.

If their folks don't care enough to correct their young, I honestly don't know what the teachers can do any ways except from new hookups. As for new hook-ups, the consent decree orders town officials to limit new hook-ups to 41 residential housing units—or the equivalent in commercial or industrial developments. Each residential housing unit is assumed to use 300 gallons per day of sewer capacity. Thus, the total amount of additional sewer inflow permitted by the decree is 12,300 gallons per day.

While the decree relaxes the present ban on any new sewer hook-ups, the decree is unclear on whether—and when—the sewer system would be able to accept additional hookups above the 41-unit equivalent.

Because of the lack of detail in the decree, and because the basis for arriving at the $35,000 fine is not spelled out, the selectmen ordered the town manager to seek additional information. The town manager will be contacting the town's sewer consultant, the DEP, and the town's attorney.

The consent decree had been expected as early as last October and had been promised by the DEP in January. In fact, the early drafting of the decree—which became stalled in the Attorney General's office, according to DEP staffers—is evidence of the fact that the decree levies additional fines against the Town, beginning April 1.

For example, the consent decree orders the Town to pay $100 per day for each day after April 1 that a specific report on sewer overflows is not prepared and submitted. The Town is also ordered to pay $100 per day for each day after May 1 that a plan of repairs is not submitted to the DEP. And if the repairs have not been started by July 15, the Town will be fined an additional $100 per day.

The consent decree—if it is accepted by the Board of Selectmen—would dictate a long-range improvement of the sewer system.

In other matters at the selectmen's meeting Monday night, the board listened to a presentation from the Noise Ordinance Committee. The committee had

To the Editor:

I nearly went into orbit recently when I read in The Citizen several issues ago that a three-story building is being proposed to replace Martha's Restaurant. It, no doubt, means more and bigger beer signs in the windows as well as the tacky signs outside.

We don't need anything more to detract to the appearance of Main Street. Bonanzas have certainly not enhanced the look of their nice barn with their addition and the taverns.

I know there are many who are thankful that what was the Bragdon Apartments is being fixed up and not sold to Cumberland Farms, as the rumor was.

I've been hoping that whoever took the nice old windows in the Oddfellows building would realize how badly it looks and restore it to the original front. The windows there now look awful—much too modern for such an old structure.

Up the street a bit is our Post Office, and that is a prime example of what should not be done to an old building. Why the facade couldn't have been retained, and the inside renovated, I can't understand. At least, instead of white clapboards, a brick front would look much more appropriate on that old building.

Whoever did the replacing of doors and the inside renovated, I can't understand. At least, instead of white clapboards, a brick front would look much more appropriate on that old building.

Whoever did the replacing of doors and the inside renovated, I can't understand. At least, instead of white clapboards, a brick front would look much more appropriate on that old building.

It seems to me that most anywhere you look around town, you see the rape of Bethel.

Evidently the Board of Selectmen and the Planning Board have forgotten how to say "No." They pay no attention to the many letters in The Citizen decrying any more building, and I believe that most of Bethel's citizens deplore this spilling of our once beautiful town. It certainly won't be described thusly in the future if a halt isn't called soon in its destruction.

Too many people are only looking for the Big Bucks instead of allowing the rest of us to be able to still look at our town with pride.

I object to a Massachusetts developer coming into our town and saying, as he did at the meeting, "I look around Bethel and I could see what it needs." All he is thinking of is the dollars flowing into his pockets. He doesn't care what his development is doing to our town.

Another thing I would like to bring up to the town manager and the selectmen is Spring Street. "No Parking" signs were put up by the Moses Mason House. On Spring Street cars are parked right to the edge of Main Street. I watched a school bus once having to back up and make a wider turn to get into that street. I would suggest that street be given the same treatment as Mason Street or else have the signs on Mason Street removed as that is a wider street and I don't believe they are necessary there and never did.

Geraldine S. Howe

go to the school board, like what just happened in Oxford Hills because of what a young person had in their possession.

I would like to show faith in our young adults. I do not think a breathalyzer is the way to go. I feel working through parents, the school, and—if necessary—the school board.

In last week's paper, I mentioned I remembered alcohol being at school (parking lot) when I went to school. I remember that [happening] twice, so I said occasionally I think that should have been a couple of times. I would like you to excuse the word "hell" because I was simply trying to make a point.

Planners seek to amend Site Plan Ordinance

Following a public hearing on an amendment to the town's Site Plan Review Ordinance, the Bethel Planning Board voted, 5-1, to recommend to the Board of Selectmen that it be placed on the warrant for Town Meeting. The amendment, if accepted by Town Meeting, would decree that building permits issued prior to Aug. 25, 1987 shall require completion by Aug. 25, 1989. Otherwise they will lose their effectivity.

The only member to vote against the amendment was Don Peeney, who was also the only person to speak on the matter during the public hearing.

Mr. Peeney spoke not as a board member but as a private citizen and an employee of P.H. Chaudiere & Co. He said cutting off the effectivity of outstanding building permits would damage his employer's building plans at the mill. "It's all part of one plan that we have one permit for. If this [amendment] is passed, our permit won't be any good after August." To re-apply under the Site Plan Review Ordinance would be a costly and time-consuming process for the company he said.

Mr. Peeney suggested an alternative method of phasing out existing building permits would be to have them made ineffective two years from the date the amendment is passed.

On a separate matter—changes in the town's Subdivision Regulations, the board voted, 6-0, to accept the changes, following a public hearing at which no one testified. (Board members Ginger Kelly and Pat Hudson were absent.)

Following the public hearings, the board got down to its regular agenda.

Jan Todd presented a sketch plan for a proposed retail shop at her Main Street home, to be called Mainely Fibres. Ginger and Gene Kelly, owners of Main Street Place, on Main Street, presented a sketch plan indicating the property now had enough parking to permit a long-term business to establish itself in the new building. (The building already houses a real estate office, a been appointed after repeated complaints from neighbors regarding band music from the town's two entertainment establishments—Sudbury Inn and The Backstage. The members of the committee included owners of the two establishments, plus some of the neighbors, plus other concerned citizens.

The committee's chairman, Dutch Dresser, told the selectmen the unusual activity of competing interests on his panel had met with success. "There was an issue. We got the adversaries together on a committee and worked it through."

The solution the committee presented was the selection of representatives to the Special Amusement Permit Rules and Regulations (which regulates nightspots) to set guidelines for sound emanating from the establishments.

There would be set for allowable levels of sound at the property line of the establishment. In response to any complaints about noise, a sound measuring instrument (costing about $75) would be used by the police to check the level. If the level exceeded the permissible limit, the establishment would be warned. If there were two warnings in a week, the establishment would be barred from having a band the following week.

The selectmen met May 15 for a public hearing on the proposed amendments to the special amusement permit.

In view of the good work done by the committee, the selectmen charged them with the new responsibility of developing an all-inclusive noise ordinance for the town. This would deal with all sorts of noises, not just music from bands.

In other matters, the board voted 5-0 to place amendments to the Solid Waste Ordinance on the Town Meeting warrant. The amendments deal with dump stickers.

The board also agreed to place an amendment to the Site Plan Ordinance on the warrant. The vote was also 5-0. (Selectmen Pat Doon and Peter Haines were absent.)

On a split vote, 2-1, the board agreed to sell the 16-foot lots in the West Bethel Cemetery, on the Flat Road, for $175 each. Selectman Jodrey was opposed to the sale, saying the price was too low. The board must still decide on a final price schedule for the cemetery lots.

There are 40 of the 16-foot lots and 20 16x16-foot lots in the cemetery. Only a few have already been purchased.

Also involved in the discussion on the cemetery was the question of whether, and how much, to improve the cemetery, which has had its topsoil partially scraped off. "If it's going to be a town cemetery, I don't want it looking like a gravel pit," Mr. Jodrey said.

The board also increased rents for tenants of the Cole Block. The rent for the front office space, currently occupied by W.J. Wheeler, was set at $420 per month. The rent for the back shop, currently occupied by Citizen Press, was set at $400 with the tenant to be responsible for needed improvements, such as a new hot water heater.

The board approved payment of a bill from the consulting firm of T.Y. Lin for $3,807 for runway construction administration. The bill will be paid from the Airport Reserve Account.

The board acknowledged receipt of an initial report from the Conservation Commission, explaining their organization and their efforts to begin understanding the town's natural resources, with an eye towards advising on their protection and development.

The new business would be a barber shop/beauty parlor, to be owned by Heidi Bean and Gail Weston. Gail Jordan, present owner of the Bethel Barber and Beauty Shop, would also be involved. The women are anxious to leave their present location in the Naimen Block because of space limitations there.

The extra parking spaces for Maine Street Place would be on the adjacent lot owned by Don Brooks. Mrs. Kelly told the board. The board members suggested she get something in writing from Mr. Brooks, who is presently recuperating from an auto accident.

In other matters, the board set May 10 for a public hearing on the proposed Sports Outlet and Sunday River Estates—a development planned along the Sunday River Road by New Hampshire sports store owner Bob Sullivan. The development would be an extension of the original plan presented last year by Bill and Vicky Myers. The number of townhouses in the plan has been scaled down from the original 10 to the present eight, and a sports store has been added.

Other 3rd Grade teachers involved in the project include Jackie Morin, Woodstock Elementary School; Carli Shurt, Andover Elementary School; and Elizabeth O'Meara, Brenda Wight, and Sonia Guay, of CPS.

Mrs. Merrill also thanked the SAD #44 Board of Directors and the Town of Bethel for their support.

Next year, a new group of 3rd-graders will plant their own crop of trees, while the 4th-graders will visit the planting site to check up on the trees they planted this year and to study a variety of environmental and forestry topics.

Nine years from now the project will be in full swing, and all students in grades 3 through 12 will have trees to take care of and study.

emergency basis, but only when it has excess capacity.

"You have to call ahead," Mr. Merrill said, and if Rumford can't take the sewage, he won't pump it from the ground. Mrs. Bartlett and Woodstock Town Manager Vern Maxfield said the two towns will try to work together on this problem, just as they have on solid waste and a stump dump.

It may take a while, however. Locating and preparing a site acceptable to the Department of Environmental Protection could take as long as two years, Mrs. Bartlett said.

She added that she was also not sure how long the "emergency basis" arrangement with Rumford could last. "I held my breath and didn't ask," she said. "I'm just glad they were willing to bail us out for now."

Mr. Merrill says that disposing of pumped-out sewage, like other waste problems, "has been coming on for a long time. It's getting awfully hard to get rid of it," he said.

James River

darkness (as measured by color units) of 33 color units. After the water is contaminated by the discharges from the mill, the water darkens to an average of 47 color units. (In comparison, water in the Sunday River—which is quite clear—measures just 15 color units. The DEP report notes that if the Androscoggin were undisturbed by man-made discoloration, it would measure about 30 color units. The DEP report states that while there is no indication that color, odor and foam present a real danger—as does dioxin—it also states that parts of Maine's rivers "are not fully usable for fishing, boating and swimming due to excessive color, odor and foam.")

The move to have paper mills clean up their discharges, and thereby limit the amount of color, odor and foam they add to Maine's rivers, was included among the recommendations of the DEP report. The recommendations were deleted at the insistence of the governor before the report was released.

The governor, with the blessing of the paper mills, instead suggested that the mills look into the matter and report back on what sort of clean-up would be feasible and how much it would cost them.

A number of legislators, however, with strong urging from the mayors of Lewiston and Auburn, from the Natural Resources Council of Maine and from the Bethel-based Friends of the Androscoggin, presented legislation that would order the mills to undertake clean-up measures—disregarding the governor's policy of further study.

Early last week the bill cleared the Natural Resources Committee on a straight party line vote—the majority Democrats out-voting the minority Republicans. And last Thursday, Democrats were joined by a number of Republicans so that the bill sailed through the House of Representatives with a veto-proof majority. It was expected to be voted on in the Senate this week.

Responding to James River's contention that they would not have to be bound by any pollution limits imposed by the State of Maine, a DEP official demurred. "They're going to have to do things," said Dave Courtemanch, of the DEP's Water Bureau.

Mr. Courtemanch said his bureau is especially upset by the amount of oxygen-depleting organic materials put into the Androscoggin by the three mills—James River, Boise and IP. These organic materials, in the process of decaying, burn oxygen from the river water. Thus, by the time the water reaches Island Pond, there is not enough dissolved oxygen to support aquatic life. Mr. Courtemanch indicated that all three mills will be forced to cut back on their oxygen-depleting discharges.

Forcing Maine mills to toe the line on new standards is relatively easy, since the DEP must give the mills permits to discharge anything into the river. For James River, which is across the border in New Hampshire but which pollutes water flowing into Maine, the ability of the DEP to enforce new rules is more difficult, but not impossible. That's because the State of Maine has to certify to the federal EPA that the New Hampshire mill's discharges meet the guidelines for mills in Maine.

EPA official Dave Cochrane, in the agency's regional office in Boston, conceded that Maine does indeed have a say in what happens at the New Hampshire mill. "We're well aware of (Maine's) requirements," he said, and will take these requirements into consideration before issuing a new permit to James River. The mill's present EPA permit expires this September.

The EPA's Cochrane said he would not be surprised if James River tried to fight the imposition of Maine standards for pollution—imposed through the EPA permitting process. But he said precedent is on the side of the EPA.

A few weeks ago the federal agency acted to protect water quality in Tennessee by ordering North Carolina to tighten its requirements on a paper mill in its state. In the case in question, a paper mill in Canton, N.C., was polluting the Pigeon River, which flows into Tennessee.

The pollution was measured by discoloration. Tennessee has a standard of a maximum of 50 color units for the Pigeon River—a standard that the North Carolina paper mill was not meeting.

Because North Carolina issued a discharge permit to the mill in disregard of neighboring Tennessee's discoloration standards, the EPA stepped in and imposed tougher discharge restrictions on the mill. In effect, the federal agency took away the authority of the State of North Carolina, the EPA's Cochrane said.

In New Hampshire, imposing the wishes of the State of Maine would not be as difficult, the EPA official said, because the federal agency must issue its own permit to James River, in addition to the required New Hampshire permit.

As I see it.

by John G. West, Jr.
Two hundred years after George Washington was inaugurated as our first President, Americans are still arguing about the proper extent of presidential powers in foreign affairs.

The issue resurfaced recently during the wrangling between the Bush Administration and Congress over aid to the Nicaraguan contras. Bush had sought the aid from Congress in order to keep pressure on the Sandinistas. Congressional leaders, however, refused to allow a straight vote up or down on the request. They demanded instead that Bush give veto power over the aid to four congressional committees, any one of which would be able to stop the dispersal of money after November.

Against the advice of many, Bush caved in to congressional demands, apparently concluding that his immediate policy goal outweighed any long-term damage that might be wrought to the presidency.

Arguments about presidential power in the area of foreign relations are nothing new. As early as 1783, controversy erupted when President Washington issued a proclamation of neutrality between France and Great Britain. He did so without congressional authorization, and that angered many congressmen.

Alexander Hamilton and James Madison, two of America's most brilliant constitutional theoreticians, squared off on opposite sides of the issue—Hamilton fiercely arguing for presidential prerogative in foreign affairs, and Madison just as heatedly opposing it.

Americans have continued arguing about the presidency ever since, and it hasn't been just the politicians who have been doing the tickering. Historians and political scientists have joined the fray as well. The most recent salvo in the scholarly debate on the subject can be found in historian Leonard Levy's new study, "Original Intent and the Framers' Constitution" (MacMillan, 1988).

Levy, a Pulitzer Prize-winner, contends that Congress, rather than the President, was intended to run the nation's foreign policy. "[T]he Framers intended Congress to control the making and conduct of war, the Senate to control foreign policy, and the President to control the ceremonial functions of representing the nation in its foreign relations..."

In other words, the President was envisioned as mere errand boy. Levy's book will no doubt be welcomed in the halls of Congress, where legislators have been going to extreme lengths in recent years to thwart all manner of executive initiatives in the area of foreign affairs. Whether or not Levy's view is historically accurate, however, is another matter.

Levy is a careful historian and the evidence he gathers to buttress his case is impressive. Nevertheless, his view has a fatal flaw: It ignores the fact that the Framers wanted a strong executive. Time and again, delegates to the Constitutional Convention advocated the necessity of a "vigorous" executive. That is why they finally agreed that the President should be chosen by the Electoral College rather than elected by Congress (they didn't want him beholden to the legislature). That is why the Framers gave the President the power to pardon criminals and veto legislation. And that is why they gave the President the duty of proposing measures for Congress to adopt. They wanted the President—the only elected official to be elected by the entire country—to represent and act on the national interest. He was to be the initiator of national policies as well as their enforcer.

Considering the Framers' general intent when it came to the executive branch, it would be odd indeed if they had wanted him to perform only ceremonial functions when it came to foreign affairs. Such a view of their beliefs also doesn't square with the text of the Constitution. According to the Constitution, the President—not Congress—nominates ambassadors and diplomats. According to the Constitution, the executive branch—not Congress—conducts the actual negotiations for treaties.

True, the Senate must ratify all treaties the President has negotiated, and it even has the right to give "advice" to the President about his negotiations. But the Senate has no power whatever to dictate how those negotiations should proceed. Levy suggests otherwise by arguing that at the time the Constitution was written the phrase "advice and consent" signified legislative predominance over the executive. That was the British understanding of the phrase, says Levy. Perhaps it was, but it need not have been the American understanding. And there is some evidence from the record of Con-

Young artists win recognition in state contest

Four Bethel students—Ben Fogg, David Buck, Harmony Mills, and Anna Sysko—will have their works of art displayed around the state with the traveling collection of the University of Maine's Art Museum. Their works were among 150 artworks by Maine school children selected in the Maine Student Art Program, an annual state-wide art competition sponsored by the Bangor Daily News in cooperation with the Bangor Mall and University of Maine's Museum of Art.

Arla Patch, SAD #44's Focus visual arts teacher, submitted a total of 37 works of art to the competition, from all four elementary schools in the district, Grades 1-4. In all, five Bethel youngsters and four Woodstock students were chosen to be among the 500 whose work was put on display at the Bangor Mall. These 500 were selected from 3,500 entries submitted.

The Focus visual arts program is part of the SAD #44 Creative and Talented Program addressing the needs of students with talent in art.

vention proceedings that delegates understood the idea of "advice and consent" more loosely.

Only in one area did the Founding Fathers significantly circumscribe a President's foreign relations powers: War. Even here the prohibition was not absolute. The Framers decided that Congress should have the power to "declare war" rather than the more general authority to "make war." James Madison and Elbridge Gerry proposed for the Barbary powers. The thrust of "attack" was to American commerce, not the American mainland, but that was enough for President Jefferson to send a squadron of warships into the area. The commander of the squadron was under orders to determine whether or not hostilities had commenced against American merchant ships; if they had, he had instructions to blockade the port of the offending powers and to "chastise their insolence... by sinking, burning or destroying their ships wherever you shall find them." As Tripoli had declared war on the United States by the time the squadron reached the area, the naval commander carried out his orders.

Jefferson's precedent has not been lost on more recent occupants of the executive office. It is not so far, after all, from the shores of Tripoli in 1801 to the waters off of Havana during the Cuban missile crisis—or even to the sandy beaches of an island called Grenada in 1983.

THE ABOVE LOCAL STUDENTS have had their works of art selected for exhibition in Bangor. Jennifer Tim (Grade 3), Ross Baker (Grade 1), Dawn Waisanen (Grade 5), and Grayson Wakefield (Grade 3) entered their artworks in the state-wide competition sponsored by the Bangor Daily News, in cooperation with the Bangor Mall and the University of Maine Museum of Art. Also having her work accepted for exhibit was Beth Putnam (Grade 2), not pictured.

HARMONY MILLS AND ANNY SYSKO were among 150—out of 3,500—to have their artwork selected to be part of a traveling exhibition that will tour the state.

students and developing their talent, the committee also wanted to satisfy a state mandate that requires schools to develop programs for the highly gifted in the visual, literary, and performing arts.

Following the initial meetings of the committee, the principals of the four schools discussed the proposal, and Moore suggested that the group begin with just one of the arts, namely the visual, and then add the literary and performing components in subsequent years. Later in the year, the committee met with area art teachers to determine program goals, establish the selection process, and provide coordination with the local art programs. Finally, the plans received the endorsement of the superintendent in each district and the approval of the respective school boards.

Carol Nielsen, now gifted coordinator for SAD #44, organized the steering committee and area art teachers for the fall meetings to discuss hiring an instructor, how to manage monetary affairs, and to finalize details. Superintendent Dewaine Craig, of SAD #44, agreed to be the fiscal agent for the group, and Alan Bray was hired as the instructor. Principal Charles Lever, of Mexico High School, offered to have the class meet in his building for one full day a month.

Meanwhile, each school encouraged interested students to complete a self-nomination form, to seek the recommendation of their local art teachers, and to submit a portfolio of their work. The selection was limited on a population percentage basis to include no more than 20 students. The allocation this year was Telstar, five; Dixfield, five; Mexico, three; and Rumford, seven. Each district was to support its own students financially with a stipend reimbursable under the state gifted and talented subsidy.

By October of 1988, the class was ready to begin. Alan Bray says that because the purpose of the class is an extension of the local art programs, he tries to draw out more personal work that has the students themselves in it, a program existing along the regular class in conceptual and intellectual imagery and thought. "I try to make it thematic," he says, "but opened so that they can contribute their own interpretation."

Each session starts with a critique of the class before with reflections. In the nine sessions, he begins with drawing, continues with painting, and works toward three-dimensional work. "I have a very good group here," he says, "with a great deal of variety."

Comments from the students support this view. Sandra Lane, from Rumford, who wants to become an art teacher when she grows up, is a follower of the Norman Rockwell style of drawing, while Michele Blodgett, also of Rumford, says she loves to paint thick and produce semi-abstract work like Van Gogh's. Cathy Nash, from Dixfield, and Darcey Wheeler, of Mexico, portray landscapes on their pieces, while Doylee Shurbleff, on their pieces, while Doylee Shurbleff, who wants to further her art education, produces charming shapes and colors in almost a greeting card style. The class "gives us more time to learn new things, to see things as they really are, and to learn to use tools differently," was a sentiment of the group related by Dawn Packard, as she gave broad brushstrokes to her canvas preparation.

Instructor Bray, who was named the 1988 Outstanding Arts Educator by the Portland School of Art, is an exceptional find for the group. He has had experience with the Tri-County Gifted and Talented Program in Dexter, the Maine Touring Artists Program, and the Summer Arts Program. He has degrees from the Art Institute of Boston and Villa Schifanoia Graduate School of Fine Arts, Florence, Italy. "Because he studied in Italy, he brings many new things to us," says Cathy Nash. "People don't realize that there should be more time for art in the school day. There should be more balance to our learning."

By VIVA WHITMAN

Well folks, I am back at my old tricks again and glad to be here. Find all the time in the hospital I wanted for a while and hope it won't be necessary again for some time to come, if ever. They are a nice place to be if needed, but one would rather be home and able to do what they please.

I would like to thank the many friends who sent cards, and I have never gotten so many before. Everyone made it much easier to bear, being in the bed and rather tied down for quite a while, so to speak. When you have a tube in your nose to the stomach and an IV going at the same time you are rather tied down. I was glad when I got rid of one of them and then glad still when I got rid of them both. Had to have a few setbacks, but guess it was all for the good and now feel like I am on the mend and gaining every day. Thanks again to all who helped by sending cards and messages to me for it meant more than words can say.

The girls there in Central Maine Medical Center, in Lewiston, were especially good to me, and so was Dr. Nemat. He did a great job on me and helped me get on the mend, leaving no stone unturned to find trouble when it existed. I shall be grateful to all for as long as I live, as the operation was one that had to be done.

Not as many squirrels and chickadees around now and have finally seen some robins since I got home. Yesterday there were some goldfinches out on the feeder and they were so pretty. This morning I saw some grackles and starlings for the first time and I told Russell that that was a sure sign of spring when they arrived. Got to say one more thing about my stay in the hospital and then forget it—but it was so nice to have my cousin's wife, Betty, come in to see me a couple of times. She works there at the hospital and came in to see how I was getting along, especially when she saw that I had to have more IV and needles. It was great to see her and have a chance to talk with her for a while, even if I was sick. Wish we could see more of her and Ardel Hayes. We like them so much. It seems we never see enough of the family members and the cousins that we see so much when growing up are gone other places or just never come to call, and I for one wish they would. I enjoy having family members come to call and wish it was done as it used to be in the old days. We went to visit, and that is more than happens in this day and age. Times sure change, and not always for the best.

Have been busy since I got home finishing up a sweater that I had in the making for one of my granddaughters, and their birthdays aren't that far off, so Grandma has to get things done. It seems good to be able to do as much as I can and really am doing better than I expected to be able to. I do like to keep my fingers busy and perhaps that is why I got so frigidly in the hospital. I didn't feel like doing anything like crocheting or knitting, but have since I got home, and the time goes lots faster and better for me.

We had quite a little blow here the other day, and expect most folks did also. It took Russell's bird feeder down as a limb broke from a tree and came down on the wire holding the feeder. Broke the bottom of the feeder off, but he was able to fix it in another way so the birds have their feeder back and are happy about it. I went out to look at it, and I wanted to take a short walk, and a chickadee landed on my head as much as to say, "Where is the feeder?" He didn't stay long but I thought it cute that he would ever light on me. They have been very tame this year, though, and we have gotten very close to them. Guess they know who feeds them and likes them. Hope to go for a walk today and make it a little longer each day. It will help me get my strength back.

Got a little news that Mary dropped off yesterday so will see if I can type it up: West Paris Grange will be holding an open meeting on May 4. This meeting will be for giving out the Citizenship award to Heidi Everett. This will also be Booster night for the Grange, with the lecturer having a special program. After refreshments for all, a regular business meeting will be held. Looks like quite an evening of events, so come and enjoy. On May 6 there will be a food and craft sale at the Grange Hall from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. so come and buy. If you have anything you would like to sell and need

Mary and Justin went to Bethel on business last week and stopped in to see Helena Bartlett, but she wasn't at home. Also called on Tammy Farnum on the way home.

The Lovejoy girls had visitors one day last week. Jennifer Haverinen of South Paris spent a day with Faith and Emily Cole and spent an afternoon with Hope. Faith spent Friday night and Saturday in South Paris with Jennifer. Hope the girls had lots of fun as we used to when visiting friends.

Greenwood St. Hillbillies 4-H Club meetings were called off because of illness where their leader was concerned. Hope she is well again and meetings will continue.

Guess I have rambled on enough for this time, but "thanks" again to one and all for the cards and concern while I have been under the weather, so to speak. It has been very much appreciated. Take care one and all and have a good week. Oh yes, and thanks to Russell for writing for me while I was sick. He did a good job.

KEEP US IN MIND

It's that time of year when your local Rotary Club must start gathering items for our annual auction. The proceeds of all of our efforts go to support such projects as the Senior Citizen Center, Christmas Dinner, Christmas Food Basket for the needy, student scholarships, support of the local health facilities, summer camp tuition, area athletes' expenses, disabled individuals' needs, etc. If you're cleaning the garage, attic, or cellar, let us get rid of those unwanted items for you. Call Roger O'Neil, 824-2131 or 824-2289, for pickup. Help us with your support of our projects. It's a good feeling!

I'm looking out at a grace of timeless space gliding above the water, and at a clear horizon against a wide sky. A tireless, hectic wind hangs on, quivering at the corners of the house. In the distance the scene is shattered with the jagged blades of black spruce. A pristine world still waits for a warmer spring.

The fields on every side remain in possession of our long winter, but in the shelter of the south wall of the house the short, dead grass of the lawn is coloring through with the first green of spring.

Matted together on the pasture hill, the pines prepare the green-flecked "candles" of new growth and will burst forth, as spring turns to summer.

April 20 the tree swallows came to inspect my bird houses. They are numerous here in summer and are usually the first of their tribe to arrive in the north. In the east they follow the coast in migrations, where they feed on bayberries. I watched them flutter and dart happily about, but as it grew colder they suddenly disappeared. When it warms up they'll be back.

Wondering what the pond edge would have to show, I took a walk near our shore. Wavelets were tumbling in over the drowned stones to strike the higher stones. There was a new sense of freedom and motion, which had come in to being, for only a few days ago this had been sealed up in a steely-black of rotten ice. The air was full of watery chuckles.

Trudging homeward, I noticed things which gave me a real sense of seasonal hope.

Katherine Hakala has returned home from her visit to Utah.

Dot Betts and I joined others for dinner out on Wednesday and an afternoon at the home of Doris Slattery.

Ann Holt came home from her vacation trip and was at the Holt farm on Sunday. Robert Holt and daughter Jennifer, of Windsor, were there. Robert and family had been to Washington, D.C., during school vacation. I joined the family after going to church.

I had several outings this week: dinners in Harrison and South Paris and suppers at West Paris and the farm when David and family were there. I also went to Lewiston with the Hols, where Fay Holt had her glasses fitted. She was in Boston this week also.

My callers were Denise Adams and two children, Rena Curtis and Evelyn Heikkinen, local, and Ernest Mundt, Bethel.

Todd Swan was 4th in the high jump. Greg Summons took 4th in the discus. The 50-400 meter relay team of Mike Conkright, Scott Emery, Jamie Blake and Gregor Axler placed 2nd in an outstanding race.

Newry

By AMY HANSCOM

Mr. and Mrs. Verne Glover, Hollis, spent the weekend at their camp. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Tetley have returned home after spending the winter in Florida.

Karlene Bachelder, Betsy Clark, Louise Tetley, Gilberte Seelye, and June Swan were in Rumford bowling April 28. Betsy Clark was high on both triple and single, with one string over 110.

The Mothers Club will meet May 8, at 7:30 p.m., at the Municipal Building. Keith Slater, from Outward Bound, will speak on Drug Rehabilitation. June Swan will speak on "Maine Street 90." Cindy Moxcey, Mary Morin and Shirley Keith will serve on the snack committee.

The annual business meeting of the Newry Community Church Union Religious Society was held at the church Monday evening, April 24. Willard Wight served as moderator. Freda Robertson was elected clerk, Willard and Sylvia Wight treasurer; trustees: Owen Wight, Gilberte Seelye and Sylvia Wight; auditors: Sue Wight and Susan Bowie; janitor, Kathy Hanscom; committee to make plans for the August Old Home Day and picnic: Nancy Hanscom, Freda Robertson and Sue Wight.

Present plans are to have the picnic on the church grounds Aug. 27. A memorial service will be held by the Honor Roll on the municipal building grounds, for veterans, after the 9 a.m. church service May 23, with the flag at half mast. Church members are asked to bring a friend, or guest to church the last Sunday of each month. A substitute speaker will hold the service at the church June 4, while Pastor Hanscom is on vacation. Freda Robertson returned home April 21, after visiting relatives for several weeks. She went to California, then to Florida.

The selectmen have received a letter from Commercial Paving Co., Inc., South Portland, that Charles Arey, with his accordian, and Don Nichols, with his band, will be at the municipal building May 17, at 1 p.m., to entertain with their music, songs and jokes. The program will last approximately one hour and there is no admission charge. Charlie and Don are a well-known team and put on a very enjoyable program. Everybody is welcome—both Newry and other area residents.

BETHEL SENIOR CITIZENS

Bethel Senior Citizens will meet Wednesday, May 10, at the American Legion Hall, Gorham, N.H., at 11 a.m. The 27th Anniversary of the club will be celebrated, but the program remains a mystery. Charter Members will be honored.

The Boy Scouts arrived Friday afternoon for their Spring Camporee at Harrington's field in the Irish Neighborhood. Denny, Rita and David Wilson saw a big shaggy moose come up across the field and head for his summer habitat in Albany. The moose are on the loose, it seems, because they are being seen everywhere. Carl had to stop for one just this side of Locke Mills.

For the second weekend in a row I've got errands to take care of in the South Paris/Oxford area. For months I don't get out of town, then when I do, I could take all day getting to all the places.

LOW AND HARD—Angie Hebert delivers a pitch against Winthrop. Strong hitting carried the Rebels to a 17-5 win in Friday's home action, and helped decide an exciting 10-9 contest against a strong Lisbon squad the following day. As of the first of the week the softballers were undefeated, at 5-0.

Telstar girls run win streak to 5-0

The Telstar Regional High School softball team has started the season off with five straight wins, through last Saturday.

The team has wins over Livermore Falls, Mexico, Jay, Winthrop, and a very big win against MVC powerhouse Lisbon. (See separate story.)

This year's team is led by tri-captains Kelly Bartlett, who is leading the team with a batting average of .600 plus a team high 15 RBIs; Brenda Taylor, hitting .400 and leading the team with 16 runs scored; and Buffy Taylor, hitting .476 and having scored 11 runs to date.

Juniors Angie Jordan and Mary Beth Hannon are batting around .450 and play leftfield and second base, respectively. Sophomores Vicki Hutchins (.379), shortstop, and Kris Delano, catcher, add strength to both the offense and defense.

Another sophomore, Angie Hebert, is manning the pitching duties and doing a very good job of providing control for the defense. Freshman Jenni Bailey is starting in right and adds good hitting and speed to the team.

Junior Kristen Cushman is a spot starter in the outfield, and junior Amy Strindley and freshman Shilo Hutchins add depth to the team. Sophomore Lynn Buckingham and Freshmen Crystal Chase, Molly Gray and Amy Hannon round out the team.

The team is aiming for an 8th straight year in the playoffs and are well on their way. Games this week include Madison on Monday, Mt. Abram at home Wednesday and Thursday at Lisbon.

Telstar ends Lisbon's 34-game win streak

This past Saturday, the Telstar Rebels bested the softballers of Lisbon on the home field by a 10-9 score. This marked Lisbon's first loss in over two years of play in the Mountain Valley Conference. The team had won a remarkable 34 straight games.

In Saturday's game, the Greyhounds jumped out to a 6-0 lead after two innings as the Rebels had some difficulty with walks and an error.

The Rebels came back to take the lead, however, after scoring three runs in the 3rd and four in the 4th. After exchanging runs in the 4th, Lisbon took the lead with two runs in the 6th. In the bottom of the 7th, the hosts loaded the bases with hits by Brenda Taylor and Vicki Hutchins sandwiched around a walk to Angie Jordan. Following an out, freshman Jen Bailey drove in the tying run with a sharp single to left, and Mary Beth Hannon then worked the Lisbon hurler for a base on balls, to force in the winning run. A very exciting finish to a very exciting game.

Vicki Hutchins and Mary Beth Hannon had the big bats for the Rebels, with three hits each; Buffy Taylor and Kelly Bartlett added two each. Angie Hebert pitched very well to gain her fifth win of the season.

The win should be worth a lot of heat points to the Lady Rebels when the ratings come out. Coach Jim Lunney said of the win by his charges, "Great game, ladies."

THIS WEEK AT THE Moses Mason House

All members and friends of the Bethel Historical Society are reminded that the history of Paradise will be the featured topic at the monthly meeting on Thursday, May 4, in the meeting room of the Dr. Moses Mason House, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Trustee Chairman Margaret Joy Tibbets will make a slide presentation on this important section of Bethel, which goes back to the early years of the 19th century. Anyone with photos, artifacts or memories relating to this area is urged to bring them to the meeting. Everyone is welcome.

Agnes Haines has completed an index to the scrapbook kept by Sumner Kimball, of Lovell, from 1903 to 1923. This book contains numerous references to the Kimballs in western Maine and is of particular interest to those doing family research. The gift of Stuart F. Martin, of Rumford Point, the scrapbook is now available to researchers. Mrs. Haines' index adds to its ease of use.

Joyce Wanger, of Rumford, a graduate student in public history at West Virginia University, has presented the Society a copy of her paper on 19th century medicine in Bethel. Mrs. Wanger has reviewed references to Bethel doctors in several repositories as well as read much of the 19th century literature relating to physicians in western Maine. The paper—of more than 30 pages, including extensive documentation—is now available for those interested in medical practices in Bethel before the Civil War. Anyone interested in reading it, or in doing any other research, is invited to do so during regular business hours, Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Other times may be arranged by calling 824-2908.

Newest life members of the Bethel Historical Society include Rodney and Anne Hackwell, of North Easton, Mass.

STRATEGIC PLANNING SEMINAR

"Strategic Planning for Owners and Managers" is the topic of a small business seminar, to be held at the Bethel Inn on Thursday, May 18, 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m., sponsored by the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education program and the Bethel Area Chamber of Commerce.

Bill Seretta, president of Harper Computers, in Portland, will be the presenter for the session, which will demonstrate how to use future forecasts in formulating plans and strategies for small businesses and organizations. It will also teach specific and practical techniques for this purpose. The workshop has been planned for those involved in making decisions about the future for businesses or non-profit organizations. It is part of a series of four small business seminars offered by SAD #44 and the Chamber this spring.

Mr. Seretta, who serves as a consultant on future issues to a number of organizations in Maine and nationally, is an entrepreneur and futurist. In addition to his ownership of Harper Computers, Seretta is co-owner of Camp Hammond Restaurant and Meeting Center, president of the Yarmouth Chamber of Commerce, member of the Commission on Maine's Future, Vision 2000, and treasurer of the MaineWatch Institute.

To register for the Strategic Planning seminar, call the SAD #44 Adult and Community Education office, 824-2780. The registration fee of $25 includes breaks and lunch at the Bethel Inn.

THOUGHTS FROM THE Pastor's Study

The Bethel Area Clergy Association, with the help of pastors of surrounding churches, brings you these meditations. Not based on any set theme, they will be individual for each pastor. It is hoped you will find in these words, comfort and help for your daily life.

Most of us take our religion very seriously. When we put on our Sunday best to go to church, we often put on our most solemn, if not to say somber, faces. Religion is not a laughing matter, we think. We sometimes behave as though it's a sacrifice to laugh in church, or even to crack a smile.

Religion, however, deals with the whole of life, and that includes laughter as well as solemnity. Tragedy and comedy both developed out of the ancient religious festivals of the Greeks. Tragedy came from the rituals celebrating the dark side of life, comedy from those rituals that celebrated the lighter side. Both were necessary, the Greeks believed, in order to live a complete life. A religion of solemnity alone was only a partial religion.

Learned theologians debate the issue: Does God have a sense of humor? I myself do not feel confident in speaking for God on this matter. I do believe, however, that Jesus had a sense of humor. A theologian describes a child laughing hysterically at Jesus' admonition to "First cast the plank out of your own eye, so that you can see to pluck the speck of sawdust out of your brother's eye." (Matthew 7:3) The idea of a plank in someone's eye struck the young child as hilariously funny—as, I believe, Jesus intended it.

Or take the saying of Jesus, "It is harder for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven than for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle." (Mark 10:25) Learned scholars who debate what Jesus really meant by this statement may be missing the joke. He was picking the pomposity of the wealthy who felt that their riches gave them special privileges. By comparing them to camels trying to pass through the eye of the needle, he was deflating their self-importance and their complacency.

I have always liked the theological concept of grace. Grace enters our life from outside and transforms us in unexpected ways. It strikes me that laughter is the supreme form of grace, the way in which the grace of God is manifested most immediately in our day-to-day lives. By relieving us of the burden of our own self-importance, laughter opens us up to new ways of seeing things, new ways of experiencing reality. Laughter brings grace, and an ability to laugh spontaneously and wholeheartedly is the best evidence I know of a state of grace.

NO PROBLEM—Shortstop Vicki Hutchins puts the squeeze on an infield pop-up during early inning action against Winthrop last Friday. Vicki also went 3-for-4 at the plate, knocking in three runs. Teammate Kelly Bartlett went 4-for-5 and picked up two RBI in the Rebels' 9-5 victory. The following day, the locals brought high-flying Lisbon down to earth, ending the Greyhounds' 34-game win streak with a 10-9 defeat. The Rebels were undefeated (5-0) going into this week's games.

From Augusta

by Sen. R. Donald Twitchell

Medical advances in the last several decades have produced ambivalent results for our elderly population: While scientific progress has increased the longevity of the average American, in many cases the extended time has been impoverished in its quality.

At the State House, concern for improving health care and support services for Maine's seniors is highly evident in the number and scope of legislative proposals under consideration.

More than most states, Maine has been in the vanguard of identifying problem areas and developing innovative programs for its older citizens. But, the lack of resources has prevented it from bringing a full measure of response to bear on the problems, and as the elderly element grows as a percentage of the state's total population the problems are becoming more acute and troubling.

For instance, while Maine has a pilot home care program that serves 1,400 older citizens in addition to 800 others receiving home services under a state/federal Medicaid plan, their combined total represents slightly under 10 percent of an estimated 22,000 who would qualify for the services if available. Here are a few other facts that profile the face of Maine's aging population:

• Nearly 14 percent of Maine's population is 65 or older, and this segment is growing. Between 1970 and 1980, it increased by almost 24 percent, and in the next five years edged upward by nine more percentage points.

• An estimated 72 percent of elderly households are home-owners, but a third of these homes are considered sub-standard.

• Studies project that by 1991, an estimated 34,000 will need some form of home care or community-based services. But, at the same time, it is believed there will be 2,700-4,300 empty beds in nursing homes.

• The mismatch between resources and needs is already apparent. In August, 1988, long-term care facilities in the state reported a total of 382 empty beds. Yet, there were 123 Medicaid patients occupying more costly acute care beds in

Parents of Gould juniors gather to learn about college selection process

A keynote address and numerous seminars centering around the college admissions process highlighted the Junior Parents' Weekend at Gould Academy last weekend. Juniors and sophomores and their parents were given the opportunity to focus on the various aspects of selecting colleges and maximizing chances of admission.

Saturday morning's keynote address was given by Middlebury College Associate Director of Admissions James Williams, who stressed the importance of finding a college suited to one's interest and abilities, where one will be happy to spend four years, rather than judging colleges solely on their prestige and reputation. "There are 4,000 colleges in this country, and it makes no sense to eliminate 3,500 of them from the start," he warned. "Put them all on the starting line and give them a fair chance."

Mr. Williams also led two of 10 seminars given Saturday—"The College Essay" and "The Interview." Susan Tree, associate dean of admissions at Bates College and an intern in Gould Academy's office of college counseling, offered the seminar "The Application: Putting Your Best Foot Forward Instead Of In Your Mouth." Gould seniors Laura Ordway, Bill Daly, Adalberto Jackson and Beth Allen reflected on their challenges and success in the seminar "Coping with the Senior Year."

Parents also enjoyed afternoon sports events on campus, and a number attended the Vandeville Revue put on by the Mahosue Arts Council at Telstar Regional High School. While Sunday was a relaxed family day, with no formal activities, the Gould Academy Parents' Auction Committee had its first meeting in preparation for next October's auction fundraiser. Over 20 parents joined this year's auction committee heads Kelly and Sherry House, parents of junior Gabe House.

Jennie Cooley competes in state's geography bee

Jennie Cooley, 8th Grade student at Telstar Middle School, competed in the State Geography Bee at Augusta Civic Center on April 14. Jennie won the Telstar Geography Bee and scored in the top 100 in the state on a written exam in order to be eligible to compete at the state level.

The National Geographic Society will fly all first-place winners from the State Bee, along with their teacher escort, to Washington, D.C., to participate in the National Geography Bee on May 18 and 19. The first place national winner will receive a $25,000 college scholarship.

Ask a lawyer. . .

I am a widow in my 70's. Right now I am in fairly good health. However, I am concerned that in the coming years I may become ill and unable to handle my own finances and make medical decisions. If this should happen, I want my oldest daughter to be able to do these things for me. I have heard of powers of attorney, living wills, guardianship, and conservatorship. What do these arrangements involve, and what do you recommend?

You can arrange for your daughter to handle your finances by signing a document called a durable power of attorney. This document gives your daughter the power to handle your money and property for your benefit and to provide for your support. She would have, among other things, access to your bank accounts, the power to pay bills and spend your money, and the power to sell, mortgage or rent out your house. Under this arrangement, you and your daughter share the power over your money and property.

If you have the power of attorney take effect at the time you sign it, you would be able to make your own decisions, function independently, and use your own money and property as you please without your daughter's permission, but your daughter would also have access to your money and property. Both of you, for example, would be able to write checks on your checking account.

Your other choice is to have the power of attorney take effect later on, at such time as you should become incapacitated. Under this arrangement—called a springing power of attorney—a doctor would first examine you and certify that you had become incapacitated before your daughter could exercise any power over your money and property.

If you become incapacitated, you may also need your daughter to make medical decisions for you. To allow her to do this, you would sign a medical power of attorney, which would allow her, among other things, to decide whether you should have surgery, to agree on what medication you are given, to sign papers for your admission to a hospital, nursing home or other institution, and to decide to withhold or remove medical treatment (always with your wishes and attitudes in mind).

A living will is another means by which you can give medical instructions to your family and your doctors regarding what should be done should you become terminally ill, stating whether you wish to be kept alive on life support equipment or by other extraordinary measures. Please note, however, that a living will cannot be used to instruct the doctor about what to do if you are in an irreversible state.

West Paris

By MIRIAM INMAN

Mandy Merse, of Oakland, spent the first part of vacation week with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Sayward Lenth, and Nathan Morse came on Wednesday to stay the rest of the week. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Doughty were in Leominster, Mass. last weekend, guests of Mrs. Ruth Cole.

Forward Fellowship met at the home of Dixie Inman on Monday evening with 14 members present. A potluck supper preceded the meeting. Final plans were made for the supper, which we put on for the municipal officers on Wednesday evening. We earned $16.01 from the silent auction which followed. The next meeting will be our annual supper outing on May 22. Members should let Dixie Inman know by May 15 if they plan to attend.

The annual May sale, sponsored by the Goodwill Group of the West Paris Universalist Church will be held in the West Paris Bank room on Tuesday, May 9, from 9 a.m. to noon. Rhubarb pie will be featured as it has been for the last 18 years, and can be purchased by the piece and served with coffee if desired. Sandwiches will also be available, as well as home baked bread, rolls and other foods.

Lawyers will answer questions on subjects of general interest. The column is meant as general information and should not be relied upon for advice in a specific case. For individual advice, consult your own attorney. This month's question was answered by Sally M. Wagley, Esquire, of 100 Main St., Bethel, Me. 04915. She is a member of the Maine State Bar Association, P.O. Box 786, Augusta, 04330-0786.

At the same time, as guardian or conservator your daughter would be required to report to the Probate Court on how she is handling things for you. This means she would have less opportunity to take advantage of you. If you trust your daughter and have a good relationship with her, however, this is possibly something you are not concerned about.

"Ask a Lawyer" is published in cooperation with the Maine State Bar Association. The views expressed in this column are those of the author.

For individual advice, consult your own attorney. This month's question was answered by Sally M. Wagley, Esquire, of 100 Main St., Bethel, Me. 04915. She is a member of the Maine State Bar Association, P.O. Box 786, Augusta, 04330-0786.

At the same time, as guardian or conservator your daughter would be required to report to the Probate Court on how she is handling things for you. This means she would have less opportunity to take advantage of you. If you trust your daughter and have a good relationship with her, however, this is possibly something you are not concerned about.

News from

Woodstock School

Grade 1 has just begun a shared reading unit on the circus. We'll be reading stories, painting, writing poetry and stories about the circus.

In Grade 3 it's math, math, and more math! Our goals for fourth quarter include calculators, geometry, division skills. We have some great mathematicians.

Our "Kids For Trees" project was very successful. Last Tuesday we participated—with Andover—in tree identification, soil testing, and plotting a grid for our trees.

Thursday involved the actual planting of the trees. Our site can be seen clearly from Rt. 26. A videotape was made to be saved and shown as part of the Class of '98 Project Graduation ceremonies. We will follow up in class with a unit on the Lumber Industry in Maine.

Science goals for May will be the study of plants, sun, and stars. We will be pairing up to do written and oral reports.

In Grade 6, the double-elimination chess tournament ended with Todd Wing defeating Kevin Mullen in the championship game. Everyone in the class participated, and a special congratulatory to those students who learned how to play just this year. They did remarkably well.

The 6th Grade completed four national tests in Language, Social Studies, Science and Geography. Geography and Language Arts were very strong areas. The top-10 students of each testing area are entered nationally as a team. Special recognition goes to Elise Bennett, who scored 39/40 on the Language Arts test.

CHRISTIAN WOMEN UNITED
Tuesday, May 16, Christian Women United will hold its monthly luncheon at the Country-Way Restaurant, in South Paris, at 12:30 p.m. Tuna on dark bread, salad, and lemon tartlet will be served. The cost is $4.

The coordinator is Thelma Holden; speaker Esther Milonas from Conway, N.H., a former missionary to Greece and Australia; music will be provided by Esther Harthorne from Norway.

Free child care is available at the Episcopal Church. Please call by Friday, May 12, for reservations, at 748-5155 or 743-8888.

A variety of crafts will also be on sale. The Citizen's Planning Committee will continue its work this year updating the Town's Comprehensive Plan. We are presently seeking new volunteers. The next meeting will be held on Monday, May 15, from 7-9 p.m. at the Fire Station, followed by June 12 as the next meeting after that. For more information contact Dave Walton, Bill Gibson, Brenda Gould, Jim Marshall or Wendy Newmeyer.

Volunteers can assist small woodlot owners

Do you own woodland in Oxford, Androscoggin, Sagadahoc, Cumberland, or York counties? Are you considering a timber harvest? Do you want to encourage wildlife in your woodland?

The Woodland Volunteer Program can help you identify what information or help you need, depending on your management goals, and where to get it. Local community volunteers answer your questions by phone or visit your land at your request. They have been trained to help you identify interests or concerns associated with your woodland and can connect you with appropriate professionals for information and/or assistance with forestry, soils, wildlife, recreation, watershed management and environmental protection issues.

The goal of the Woodland Volunteer Program is to improve the growth and quality of woodlands in accordance with the landowner's interests. This is a free educational service for all people in Oxford, Androscoggin, Sagadahoc, Cumberland, and York counties who are concerned about their woodlands and the environment.

This program is co-sponsored by the University of Maine Cooperative Extension Service, the Small Woodland Owners Association of Maine, and the Maine Forest Service.

Contact your county Extension Office to have a Woodland Volunteer call or visit you. In Oxford County, call 743-6322.

The Plus Side

Now you see it, now you don't. Is how some people feel about Medicare, Medicaid, and the new Catastrophic Care Bill. Which does what, is the question. Question: "My friend tells me that Medicare will cover the cost of a nursing home. I don't think it does. Which of us is right?"

Answer: Medicare covers only a limited time in a skilled nursing home, and there are very few around. Most people need long-term care in an intermediate or sheltered-care setting, which Medicare does not cover—and neither does the Catastrophic Care Bill. But if you qualify, Medicaid does.

Question: "So how do I qualify for Medicaid?"

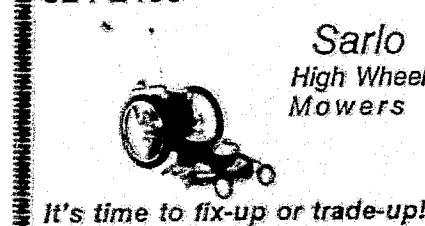

Answer: You must be eligible for Supplemental Security Income or medically needy and have income, including savings and assets, below $374 a month for an individual or $552 for a couple, to qualify for Medicaid.

Question: "Does this mean I cannot own my own home?"

Answer: No, your home is yours as long as you live.

The most complete answers to questions on Medicaid, and how to pay for a nursing home, can be had from your local Area Agency on Aging, or write, Maine Committee on Aging, State House Station 127, Augusta, 04333.

Over 400 bikers expected for 'Trek Across Maine'

"Can you imagine the sight of 400-450 bicyclists riding across the State of Maine?" asks Peter King, trek director for the American Lung Association of Maine. "We are well on our way with 325 registrations already processed by the end of April. Everyone wants to be a part of this ride, with registrations in from all over New England and as far away as Colorado," said Mr. King.

The mood of excitement is sweeping through the Association's trek staff, volunteers and the trekkers themselves in anticipation of the 180-mile bicycle ride, which will begin at the Sunday River Ski Resort on Friday, June 16.

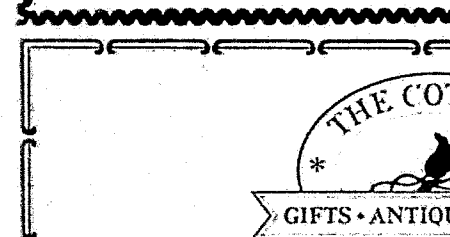

The participants will spend their first night at the University of Maine Farmington, the second night at Colby College and a celebration is being planned for the finish in Rockland. This is a three-day adventure for the trekkers, who will raise over $150,000 for the American Lung Association of Maine by challenging their legs and lungs. The money raised will directly help the American Lung Association of Maine increase their efforts in the fight for clean air and healthy lungs.

There is still room for participants. For more information on the fifth anniversary Trek Across Maine, contact the ALA of Maine, 128 Sewall Street, Augusta, 04330 or call 1-800-462-LUNG.

Through a 10-year-old's eyes

By ALEX GILLIES

I don't understand why people pay other people to cut a part of their body off. I do it, my parents do it, and most of my friends all get haircuts. I suppose if people didn't, others would tell them to tie their hair, instead of their shoelaces, so they didn't trip.

You'd think people would be scared to sit in a chair and have people go over their head. But no, people think of it as a chance to get "more beautiful." I'll keep getting my hair cut, and so will everyone else. I wonder if anyone collects hair?

If you had a chance, would you go to Venus? While you are reading this, an American space shuttle should be on its way there. On Venus the temperature is 800 degrees Fahrenheit. They better wear plenty of sun tan lotion. They will be gone 450 days. That is exactly two Venus years. I wonder if they'll have a welcoming committee when they arrive on Venus.

Tri-Town Rescue

The seventh annual Tri-Town Rescue walk, bike-a-thon is scheduled for Sunday, May 7, at the Agnes Gray School. Bikers and hikers will travel five miles up Route 219 to Greenwood City and five miles back the same route to the West Paris School. Proceeds will benefit Tri-Town Rescue ambulance fund.

Registration is at noon at the school with participants leaving around 12:30 p.m. Rain date is two weeks later, May 21. Children must have the written permission of their parent or guardian. Pledge forms may be picked up at the Agnes Gray School, Woodstock Elementary School or at Trap Corner Store. All ages are encouraged to participate. Family groups are welcome. Refreshments will be available throughout the route and at the finish.

Any questions about the weather or the bike-a-thon should be directed to Dorene Benson, 874-6946.

WEST BETHEL Children's Center

Our Headstart and daycare children were eager to reunite after being separated a week, due to spring vacation.

Our theme at the Center is community friends. We've invited a variety of guests to come and share their professions with us.

Firemen David Brown and Jimmy Young came to share the fire fighting profession. After a discussion on fire safety we got to examine a firetruck and other fire fighting equipment. By the end of their visit, we had several boys and girls swayed towards the fire fighting profession. We would like to extend our thanks to David, Jimmy, and the Bethel Fire Department.

Laura Plawlock, from the Bethel Ambulance Service, was another visitor. The children had an opportunity to get acquainted with an ambulance in a non-threatening situation. Laura invited us to sit in the ambulance so we were able to get a good look inside. Thanks, Laura!

Our most recent "stars" include: Amanda Durham, Eben Katlin, and Jeremy Gibbs.

Amanda is five years old. She lives in Bryant Pond with her parents, Betsy and Brian, and brothers Jeremy and Danny. This is Amanda's second year of Headstart. She will be attending kindergarten in the fall. We're really going to miss her and her family.

Eben Katlin is four years old. He lives in Gilsum with his parents, Martha and Donny, and his older brother Nicholas.

Eben did a great job sharing his family and favorites with us.

Jeremy recently celebrated his fifth birthday. He makes his home in West Bethel with his parents, Linda and Tom, and his sisters Heather and Tracey. It was obvious by Jeremy's enthusiasm that he really enjoyed being our "shining star."

BRIDE-TO-BE LIVED IN ANDOVER

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie K. Snyder, Holden, Mass., formerly of Andover, announce the engagement of their daughter, Lori A. Snyder, to Jeffrey M. Stone, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Stone, of Holden, Mass.

The bride-to-be is a 1986 graduate of Wachusett Regional High School and a 1988 graduate of Quinsigamond Community College with an Associate Degree in Business Technology and a major in Travel/Tourism.

She is employed at American Express, Travel in Marlboro, and Vinny's Restaurant in Holden.

The prospective groom is a 1985 graduate of Wachusett Regional High School and is attending Bridgewater State College, studying management, with a concentration in marketing.

The couple is planning a May wedding.

Another cold week. The temps were below freezing every morning and the weekend was blowing too much to do much raking and cleaning up. When one does get the debris raked up how much better everything looks.

Frank left early Friday morning for Harrison where he met Dick Chapman and they went to Waterville to a Maingas meeting. They then went to Benadicta (near the Canadian border) to Dick's camp for the weekend. When Frank got home he said, "What a bummer." When I asked him what was the matter he said that when they got up Saturday morning there was over four inches of new snow and Sunday morning another four inches had fallen.

Our granddaughter Theresa came Friday, April 21, and spent the weekend with her father and I. We went to Mexico Saturday night for supper.

April 22, "Edie" Smith came up for a short visit and brought up some peaches she and "Smitty" (Edith and Homer Smith) had been good enough to pick up for me when they visited their daughter Christine and husband, Don Batchelder, and grandson, Brett, in South Carolina. They left April 13 to their son Kerry in Newburyport, Mass., who drove his parents into Logan Airport and then to Atlanta, Ga., where they were met by their children. April 14, Don and "Smitty" went to North Wilkesboro, N.C., to a car race. Some of their points of interest were a huge farm market as well as a large flea market. April 20, Don, Christine and Brett took the Smiths back to Atlanta, and after Kerry picked up them at Logan they spent the night with Kerry and family and drove back Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hannon and family went April 15 to visit his folks, Mr. and Mrs. George Hannon, in Durham, N.H., and spent the night. They also visited her mother, Mrs. Betty Reith, in Portsmouth, N.H., and spent Sunday night. April 17 they attended a softball game at Oxford Hills in which Mary Beth Hannon played, and April 21 to Livermore, which the Telstar girls won 14 to 7.

Nate Bean, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Bean, also played on the boys' team at Livermore April 21. Nate has second honors at Telstar and has chosen John Hopkins University, in Baltimore, Md.

NEWS FROM Andover Elementary School

Bike-a-thon coordinator Margie Bartlett is looking for Andover residents to join the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital "Wheels For Life" Bike-a-thon, slated for May 6.

This ride honors Brian, a leukemia patient at St. Jude. All proceeds are sent to St. Jude for research, which will some day lead to a cure for childhood cancer. Riders sign up sponsors who promise to make a donation based on each lap completed. There is a 20-lap limit, therefore if a sponsor pledges 25 cents a lap and a rider completes the full 20 laps, that sponsor will donate $5. Riders who raise $25 will receive a certificate and a St. Jude T-Shirt. When $75 is raised the rider also receives a sports bag.

On May 6 riders from Grades K-3 will ride around the Common. Grades 4-6 will meet at the school and ride around the "mile square." The ride starts at 9:30 a.m.; the rain date is May 13. Refreshments will be provided.

A prize will be awarded to the top money-raiser in each age group. Prizes and this year's T-Shirt will be on display at school. Sponsor forms may be obtained at school or by contacting Margie Bartlett, at 392-3632.

On Sunday, May 21, the Andover Seniors will be having a car wash, bake sale, and lawn sale at the Andover Fire Station. Monies earned will go to the college-bound seniors of Andover.

Anyone wishing to donate lawn sale items may contact Copper Hutchins, 392-3512, or Barbara Simmons, 392-2821.

Funding for a $5,000 grant written by Andover teachers has been approved by the State. Mrs. Gallant, Mrs. Sobin, Mrs. Meisner, Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Cohen (an Andover parent who teaches in Bethel) developed the grant as part of the APT Library Committee's efforts to create more reading experiences for A&S students. The committee will now be launching a fundraising campaign to provide the required $5,000 matching funds. The grant supports a project called, "Three Ways to Share," which encourages K-2 readers to share favorite books together and at home. The grant budget provides for $4,000 worth of new books for classroom libraries. Anyone who wishes to join the Library Committee, or help with fundraising, please call Jeanne Shelton.

Upton

By ARLINE BERNIER

Christine Largesse was guest of honor at a Bridal Shower at the Upton home of her mother, Lucille Largesse, given by her maid of honor, Perdita Davis.

She received many gifts from the several present from Upton, Newry, Dr. and Mrs. W. Stewartson, Bethel, and other towns and from several invited guests unable to attend.

The large bridal cake, made by Lucille, was beautifully decorated with a bride figure in white, a maid of honor in white and burgundy and the bridesmaids in white and pink, replicas of the gowns to be worn by the wedding party.

Barry and Robin Nevel, of Chandler Hill, were evening guests of the Howes. April 22, Bob and Linda Howe joined Vernon Davis and Tammy Poland, who all went to New Hampshire for supper. Shilo Hutchins watched the Howe boys.

Bob Howe and sons have planted their peas.

Ruth Mason went to Augusta to stay with her grandchildren recently while their mother, Terry Blake, went into the hospital for surgery. Ruth drove back later that day.

April 26, I took "Frankie" over to North Bridgton to Dr. Shedd's. While waiting for the drug store to open I went to see Katie Hanson and then to Charlie's to get my spiked tires changed before the first of May. April 27 visited Ruth Collins and daughter.

How nice it looks after folks have raked their lawns after the long winter.

Notes from the

Woodstock Historical Society

Most towns have at least some architectural landmarks, and Woodstock is no exception. These are Birchmere, Dreamhome, Birch Villa, and the Conservation Camp. The old coffin factory, in South Woodstock, is notable, as is the Cole-Alger estate. The Chase and Cole stores still stand. And there is the Grange-Masonic Hall-Library complex in the center of town.

There are attractive churches, private residences, and old farm buildings. The historical society museum has been carefully renovated. Look about you and enjoy Woodstock's architectural heritage. We have mentioned only a few buildings. There are many more.

Woodstock students heading for Beantown

Woodstock School 6th-graders have completed their fund-raising efforts for the upcoming field trip to Boston. The trip will be on May 25-28 and will include a visit to the Boston Museum of Science, the New England Aquarium, Faneuil Hall, and the U.S.S. Constitution.

A highlight of the trip will be a visit to Fenway Park on the evening of the 25th to see a Red Sox vs. Seattle Mariners game.

The group will spend Thursday evening at the Martin E. Young School in Randolph, Mass.

CHOLESTEROL SCREENING

Stephens Memorial Hospital, together with the Allied Health Program of Vocational Region II, will sponsor a cholesterol screening for the community on May 10, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and May 11, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the board room of the hospital. Screenings will be done on a walk-in basis.

The American Heart Association states that the three most important contributors to heart attack are high blood cholesterol level, high blood pressure and cigarette smoking.

The cholesterol screening is done by the fingerstick method. Results are available in three minutes and include counseling by registered nurses. The fee for the screening is $5. Cholesterol screening is not intended to be a substitute for regular physician care.

For more information, call the Health Education Department, at 743-5933, ext. 471.
